LiveOps Breakdown

Dictionary

- Polychrome: main gacha currency, 160 polychromes = 1 encrypted master tape or 1 master tape.
- Monochromes: paid version of polychromes, used to buy some bundles or skins, also convertible to polychromes (1 monochrome = 1 polychrome).
- Master tape: gacha currency used on the standard banner (the permanent banner).
- Encrypted master tape: gacha currency used on the premium banner (limited time banner).
- Boopons: Entirely F2P banner for Bangboos, a kind of pet that you can take into battle for specific boosts.
- Season = Version, a game season is directly related to its version.

Events

Main Story Boost Event

- This event gives the player additional rewards for clearing the newly released Main Story chapter within a certain time period, in this case, the whole season.
- Exists as a way to incite players that don't necessarily enjoy or seek out the narrative side of the game with extra rewards, so they complete it and in turn spend more time in-game.
- This event hasn't been added to the game previously, but it has appeared in other games like Genshin Impact or Wuthering Waves.
- 300 polychromes.
- This event primarily targets Achievers and Explorers, offering rewards for completing new story chapters while not appealing much to Socializers or Killers.

Agent Story Boost Event

- Most of the agents in the game have unique missions in which you find out about their past and themselves, this event mixes the newly released agent stories with battles in which you can use the new character as a trial giving you extra rewards for clearing them, making the agent story a more engaging than being standalone.
- As well as the Main Story Boost Event, serves as a way to incite players to play through these narrative missions, but this mission includes combat missions as well, serving as an extra motivation boost for combat driven players.
- This event has been repeated on various occasions in the past, especially in the newer versions.

- 100 polychromes for completing the agent story, another 100 for the combat.
- This event appeals to Achievers and Explorers, with some additional interest for Killers due to combat stages and light appeal for Socializers through character-focused content.

Seasonal Event

- This event serves as the “big event” in the season, being incredibly full of rewards and extending throughout the whole season. These kinds of events normally introduce a new kind of game mode as well as expanding on them with character interactions and/or combat stages.
- Designed for all kinds of players, from casual to end game players, offering new mechanics and systems in a new environment. These events, after the season ends convert into permanent events, keeping some of the rewards and maintaining these game modes for everyone that wants to continue enjoying them.
- This kind of event happens once every 2 or 3 seasons.
- 1500 polychromes, misc. Rewards.
- This major event is designed for all four types, Achievers, Explorers, Socializers (lightly), and Killer since it introduces new modes, story elements, interactions, and challenging stages.

All-new Program

- Login event, joining a total of 7 days while the event is active gives you all the rewards available, runs for the whole season.
- Appeals to every kind of player.
- 10 encrypted master tapes.
- This login reward event is aimed almost entirely at Achievers, offering daily progression incentives with little relevance for the other player types.

Exploration Event

- Consists of various missions related to exploration in a new area unlocked after playing through the most recent Main Story chapter.
- The same way as the Main Story Boost Event, this event incites the player to play through the new chapter of the story to unlock this zone and eventually the rewards.
- This event happens almost every time that a new area is introduced, especially post 2.0 this has happened almost every season.
- 440 polychromes distributed among various missions, misc. Rewards.
- This event strongly targets Explorers and secondarily Achievers, providing a new area to investigate but offering little for Socializers or Killers.

Bi-weekly Events

- These kinds of events occur all throughout the season, using already introduced mechanics in a new environment or situation, these events consist of various stages that unlock every day, some of which need to be completed on the very same day they're introduced to unlock the next one. These stages vary between 5 and 7 in number, and the event ending after 14 days encourages the player to keep playing frequently to not miss the rewards.
- Depending on the mechanics used in the event it varies wildly, it can be a casual minigame to intense combat stages, the only type of player that all these types of events appeal the most to are the reward seeking players, which are the most common in the game, although that is not to say that they're the only ones that these events appeal to, but it varies a lot between one and the other.
- These rotating events mainly attract Achievers with daily progression goals and Killers when combat stages are involved, with moderate appeal to Explorers depending on mechanics and none for Socializers.

Gacha Banners

- Every season, there are a total of 8 banners, 4 being characters and 4 being weapons, every character banner is always paired up with their signature weapon banner.
- As this is one of the core systems in the game, it appeals to every player in the game, that is, depending on the character that is released and if the player in question wants the character or weapon, in general, character banners are a lot more popular than weapon banners.
- Interacts with pretty much every system in the game, everything that gives polychromes eventually end up in the gacha sooner or later.
- Gacha banners appeal to Achievers, Killers, and Socializers who enjoy sharing pulls, while also drawing mild interest from Explorers who like discovering new characters.

Final Callback

- This event acts as a character trial event in which the game gives you a tutorial for all the boosted characters in the event, it goes hand in hand with the gacha banners, so they start and end in the same time frame as the banners.
- Appeals to pretty much every player in the game except those that don't like the character and don't really care about the rewards.
- 40 polychromes, misc. Rewards.
- This trial event is designed for Achievers, Explorers, and Killers, allowing players to test characters and earn rewards, with only slight relevance for Socializers.

Double Drop Event

- These kinds of events occur at the end of almost every banner, boosting by double the drops for the first 5 stages you complete every day, serves to boost engagement and rewards active players with extra resources for the next character they are farming for.
- Appeals to both active and non-active players, as it serves as a powerful engagement tool that boosts activity in the end of banners, where most of the player base doesn't really play as much.
- This event primarily targets Achievers and Killers, boosting farming efficiency without offering anything meaningful for Explorers or Socializers.

Retention Tools

Daily Tasks

- Gives rewards doing some simple tasks (5 minutes at most).
- Daily reset.
- It's a rewarding way to incite people to enter the game.
- Gives materials for gacha and character upgrades.
- 60 polychromes, 600 exp, misc. Rewards.

Weekly Bingo

- Gives rewards while doing various tasks, like login x days, craft items, etc.
- Weekly reset.
- Ties into daily tasks and offers more rewards for them.
- The same as daily tasks but also gives a currency for decorations for the MC's base, also ties to daily tasks, being in the same menu as well to give extra reward for barely more effort.
- 60 polychromes, 1050 exp, 65 decoration vouchers, misc. rewards.

Battle Pass Missions

- Gives various rewards for a wide array of missions.
- Seasonal reset. daily, weekly and seasonal missions.
- Gives immediate rewards (battle pass exp) for doing a lot of missions tied to progression, farming, events and the gacha system itself. The levels give important rewards such as polychromes, batteries (used for farming), gacha currencies and resources for character upgrades.
- Ties into practically every system in the game, daily missions can be mostly completed only doing the daily tasks, weekly missions tie into farming, weekly resetting game modes and consumption of resources, seasonal missions tie directly to final objectives of events, playing the story or using the gacha.
- F2P: 5 master tapes, 5 boopons, 6 batteries, misc. rewards.
P2W: F2P + 5 boopons, 4 encrypted master tapes, 780 polychromes, 6 batteries, misc. rewards.

Hollow Zero Missions

- Gives high rewards for completing challenging the Hollow Zero.
- Weekly reset.
- Appeals to mid and end game players looking for good rewards or a hard challenge.
- Ties directly to Hollow Zero, gives gacha currencies, polychromes, exp, skip tickets (used for farming) and resources for bangboo upgrades.
- 160 polychromes, 5 boopons, 1 master tape.

Shiyu Defense

- Has one of the best reward pools apart from limited-time events.
- Bi-weekly reset.
- Appeals to end game players, offering a very high challenge in exchange for very good rewards.
- Ties to overall progression focusing on polychromes and gives currencies for the Association Supplies store.
- 720 polychromes, 1060 investigation merits, misc. rewards.

Deadly Assault

- Offers a challenging encounter and offers good rewards.
- Bi-weekly reset.
- Appeals to end game players with maxed out characters, has one of the hardest challenges in the game and gives the player good rewards in exchange.
- Ties in the same systems as Shiyu Defense.
- 300 polychromes, 720 investigation merits, misc. rewards.

Suibian Temple

- It's a kind of minigame in which you have to run a store within an encapsulated economy that gives the player rewards outside it.
- Variable reset.
- Appeals mainly to casual players looking for a fun new experience or other types of players that are mainly interested in the various rewards it offers.
- It's a pretty encapsulated minigame, offering outside rewards for level-up missions and a store in which you can exchange the minigame's currency for polychromes, cosmetics and various resources. After completing the level-up missions, the main motivation to continue playing is for the various expensive cosmetics, recently the game has added a feature for players with a maxed Suibian Temple to automatically manage the store.
- 1420 polychromes, 4 boopons, misc. rewards.

Notorious Hunt

- Gives boss materials for free for a max of 3 times per reset.
- Weekly reset.
- Appeals to all kinds of players, offering difficulty adjusted boss battles and giving crucial materials for character upgrades for free.
- Ties mostly into character upgrades and the Association Supplies store since there are weekly missions giving investigation merits for clearing boss battles.
- 3 boss exclusive materials, 90 investigation merits.

Threshold Simulation: Hard

- Gives a lot of rewards for clearing a wide array of boss battles with a limited number of characters.
- Seasonal reset.
- Appeals to end game players that own a lot of characters and have them all maxed out or mostly upgraded.
- Very few ties as the game mode is mostly encapsulated, ties mostly to progression and gacha.
- 600 polychromes, 1 title, misc. rewards.

Invite Commissions

- Kind of a date with practically every character to increase affection with them and earn various rewards, maxing out at 3 dates per reset.
- Daily reset.
- Appeals to players that are interested in interacting with the characters, players that are only interested in the rewards and everything in between.
- Has ties to the cosmetics system and the gacha mainly.
- Per character – 80 polychromes, 1 profile picture, 1 animated pause menu.

Expert Challenge – Burnout

- Boosted boss battles with 2x drops.
- Resets every new banner (2 times per season).
- Appeals to all players that want to upgrade newly released characters or returning characters currently on banner.
- Ties only to character upgrades.
- Boss items 2x drop rate.

Energy Consumption (Farming)

- Consume energy to farm resources to upgrade characters.
- Variable reset.
- Appeals to everyone that wants to maximize their resource acquisition.
- Ties only to character upgrade.
- Misc. Rewards.

Inter-knot Membership (P2W only)

- Purchasable monthly membership giving you a lot of polychromes.
- Daily reset.
- Appeals to active players that play every day (mostly) that want to increase their daily gain of polychromes.
- Ties to the gacha system only.
- 300 monochromes on purchase, 90 polychromes daily for 30 days.

Offers

Gacha

- Offers polychromes and specific materials to upgrade the new character for a special discount.
- This offer is designed for pretty much every player that occasionally spends money in the game, be it a whale, a dolphin or a casual player, especially appealing to whales since it gives them a lot of the needed resources without the need of farming for them.
- They appear as pop-ups while the offer is running every time the player enters the gacha UI.

Battle Pass

- Offers polychromes, various gacha currencies and a wide assortment of useful resources, divided between a free and paid tier, as well as offering a VIP tier with extra rewards and cosmetics.
- The free BP appeals to every player, while the basic paid one appeals to pretty much everyone willing to spend money on the game occasionally, the VIP tier appeals mainly to high spending players like dolphins or whales.
- The offer appears as a pop-up the first time you open a BP every season and the option to buy it stays until the end of the season.

Inter-knot Membership

- Offers monochromes and polychromes as a login reward for 30 days.
- This is one of the most appealing offers in the whole game, boosting polychrome earnings exponentially every day with a reduced cost. For reference, the membership gives 3000 polychromes (counting monochromes) and the 3280 monochrome bundle in the shop costs 49.99$.
- The offer appears as the main page of the store while there isn't a costume being displayed in which case appears as a standalone window in the shop.

New Costume Discount

- Whenever a new costume is released, it gets a special discount that is active the whole season.
- This mostly appeals to high spending players and players that like the character a lot, so most of the costumes released are based around the most popular characters.
- The offer appears in the main page of the store while it's active.

Permanent Bundles

- These bundles give a variety of rewards, ranging from purely gacha currencies to useful materials to upgrade weapons or characters.
- Appeal mainly to high spending players, most of the occasional spenders don't buy them.
- They appear in a "Bundle Shop" section in the shop.

- This message is purely informative, with a slight to no connotation.

Integration Section – How It All Works Together

Connections

- Pretty much everything connects to the Gacha, either directly or indirectly, most of the events, game modes, retention tools and systems in the game give out as a main reward Polychromes, with which you can only buy Tapes, and these tapes only used in the Gacha.
- Daily missions connect to battlepass daily missions and weekly bingo.
- Battlepass missions connect directly to the battlepass.
- Shiyu Defense, Deadly Assault and Notorious Hunt connect to the Association Supplies store since these are the only game modes where you can collect the currency to use in the shop.
- Final Callback has a strong connection to the Gacha in the sense that it lets players try out the characters featured in the Gacha to decide if the player wants them or not, starting and ending with the banners.
- Double Drop Event connects with Energy Consumption in the sense that you spend half the energy to obtain resources during these events.
- Main Story Boost Event and Agent Story Boost Event tie directly to the new chapter of the Main Story and the new Agent Story giving a more engaging experience than the standalone missions.

Progression + Rhythm + Trust

The game as a whole has a very defined rhythm that can also be seen on other games in the genre like Genshin Impact, Honkai: Star Rail or Wuthering Waves, where the main focus is daily activities and events where the player engages in different game modes and systems keeping the daily rhythm fresh.

The weekly loop is designed so that the weekdays the player can play short sessions without missing out of daily rewards (15 minutes max) while the bulk of the gameplay is in the weekends, where the player catches up on weekly and bi-weekly game modes and events, this is mainly due to the difference of free time between weekdays and weekends. The progression follows a similar path since it's deeply tied into daily and weekly loops of farming and event completion, in the case of progress, the main limiting factor is the Energy Consumption system, since everything the player has to farm expends a definite amount of energy which has a set cap and although it can be regenerated through items such as batteries and bought with polychromes it eventually runs out.

The game's engagement fluctuates a lot in every season, the time where most players are active at one are when a new banner arrives and these only happen every season, so to maximize engagement throughout the rest of the season the game employs special Bi-weekly events and Double Drop events to reel in more players with extra rewards with reduced cost.

The main tool for player trust are the character banners, this correlates directly to the popularity of the characters, so, a few bad banners in a row can negatively affect the player trust and hurt the overall revenue of the game while continued good banners positively impact the game, in this case, there are some periods where a few bad characters were released one after the other because of the Main Story and it negatively affected the game's revenue.

This can be seen in the last few versions where a lot of non-popular characters were released one after the other, decreasing the overall revenue bit by bit, this is probably going to drastically change in the next version where one of the most anticipated characters finally releases.

Player Emotional Journey

In this recreated season Live-Ops we want to make use of the already existent retention tools without adding any more since that would be excessive. We changed up and added some events differing from the season we took as an example but mainly focused on the offers, envisioning them as more like the offers in mobile games than what this game does currently, using more pop-ups and messages instead of not showing them at all or showing them once per season at most.

In general, our intended emotional journey for the player is that of constant progression, from the purely character upgrade progression to saving up polychromes for the current or next banner, we want to facilitate and give the player the most help we can while not giving them enough so that they can get all the characters as a F2P, we want to make the player feel a true sense of progression with daily and weekly gameplay loops so that they maintain as much engagement as possible throughout the season.

Every of our additions use "XX_" as a prefix, where the first X is the type of event and the second is the counter

[illegible]

	More or less intense depending on how important the event is to the gacha (Original calendar)
	More or less intense depending on how important the event is to the gacha (Our calendar)
	Related to progression but not necessarily to the gacha
